E. Prerequisites: One of the following: Level 5 on English Department English Placement Test (HEPT), or Advanced Placement 4 or 5 in English.

F. Course Description:

This course examines the experience of immigrants to the United States through a series of specifically selected novels of writers of varying cultural backgrounds. This literature gives us the opportunity to learn about customs, religions, mores, and assimilation strategies of old and new immigrant groups.

G. Course Objectives:

1. Explain the various stages of the immigrant narrative.
2. Identify the historical, social, and political contexts in which immigrant literature is written.
3. Discuss the dynamics of assimilation and resistance as reflected in characters' cultural identity in the immigrant novel.
5. Describe the major trends, types, and themes in literature of immigration.
6. Identify and contrast the United States dominant culture to which immigrants assimilate.
8. Identify representative works of major immigrant writers and the contemporary issues affecting their communities.
9. Demonstrate knowledge of various immigrant literary works and how these distinguish themselves from the dominant American literary canon.
10. Keep a literary response journal in which students record their comprehension of texts discussed in class.

Couse Reading List:

The Interpreter of Maladies by Jhumpa Lahiri
The Chosen Shore: Stories of Immigrants by Ellen Alexander Conley
The Funeral Party by Lyudmilla Ulitskaya
House of Sand and Sun by Andre Dubus III

H. Course Policies:

1. Papers must conform to the MLA format. Each paper should reflect your best writing and analytical skills and will be graded accordingly. Written work must be in 12 pt. arial, double spaced. I encourage you to make use of my office hours or via email address to discuss rough drafts with me. All papers have to be submitted on time.
2. Cell phones must be turned off as soon as you walk into the room. Should your cell phone ring or buzz during class time, five points will be subtracted from your next grade.
3. Attendance is mandatory since much of your grade depends on class discussions and active participation. Three unexcused absences will lower your grade by one letter. I consider notes from doctors, lawyers, or bosses valid excuses. If you are absent it is your responsibility to check what you have missed with fellow classmates.
4. You are expected to write one-page responses/summaries which you will bring to class (one copy for the professor and one for yourself), this will start off class discussions, so come prepared. The responses should be typed in 12 point Arial font, double-spaced, and properly formatted. These responses you hand in at the beginning of the class. I read these responses very carefully, for they allow me to gauge your comprehension of the reading material.

I. Course Outline (tentative):

- Week 1-4 1. Introduction to the course. Concepts and theories related to contemporary issues around immigration. Discussion on the historical, political, socioeconomic and cultural perspectives of the immigrant experience. The movie Dirty Pretty Things. The Immigrants from India as portrayed in Jhumpa Lahiri's short story collection The Interpreter of Maladies. These stories offer us the opportunity to examine how the immigrant experience of the characters who "must navigate between the cultural values of their homeland and their adopted home." We examine the characters' struggles, anxieties, and biases.

This novel offers a unique perspective of the immigrant and the marginalized white Americans. immigrant experience through the eyes of young David Schearl.
- Weeks 13-15 The Russian immigrant and its historical, political, and socioeconomic background. The Funeral Party by Lyudmilla Ulitskaya emphasizes the contentious relations between memories of the old country (Russia) and the experience of the new world (the United States). Gender issues depicted in the novel will also be explored. We will study this novel and its relation to the historical moment in which it was written (the end of the Soviet Union).

Weeks 13-15

J. Teaching Strategies

This course will include lectures, group discussions, in-class writing, presentations, and on-line collaborations. Students are expected to do classroom reports. Students will participate in the class wiki where they will collaborate by providing Internet sources according to the literary works being discussed. There is a heavy reading schedule and students are expected to come to class prepared, that is, having read all texts, answered any questions assigned, as well as having notes, responses, and summaries. The class will also include independent reading. The strategies used will be directed towards increasing students' ability to critically engage with literary texts, relate them to one's personal experiences and / or social context, and make literary analysis using established terms and approaches.

When needed, we may cover 11.25 hours of the 45 hour course with alternative methods of instruction.
